Why was the dreamer given the dream?

to show lovely things are coming without the dreamer's effort within an arena of their life.

God is coming with something new to immediately fill a void within the dreamer's life (or arena they are involved in) that is awaiting things that have been previously planted to come forth.

Class Interpretations:

(What would you say to the dreamer?)

Dreamer this is a wonderful dream! It is showing you with little effort, God is bringing newness to you in a beautiful way.

great job with the encouragement/feeling of the dream! to enhance, more detail about what God is doing, more specific terms from within the dream ie: God is beautifying the landscape within an area of your life.

2nd try: Dreamer this is a wonderful dream! It is showing you with little effort God is bringing newness to you in a beautiful way. You will be surprised at the beauty and it may take you a little time to experience the fullness of this growth, yet you will still notice the beauty.

good job! more detail and more for the dreamer to sink into - begins and ends with the up-note of the dream.

There are some beautiful unexpected things coming to you within the arena of your life that may be unsettling regarding what you have already done there, but you will find it will be complimentary to it. You will find there will be no need for effort on your part to gain this and it will surround you with God's beauty as it is a gift from Him . The dream also suggests there is more to experience!

Additional Comments or revelation for the dreamer:

great job; end is excellent. first sentence feels a little awkward; could revise to "coming to you within an arena of your life that will be complimentary to some work you have already done there." unsettling is not necessarily within the dream, so i would stay away from that language (not make more or less of something than God does). God addressed that issue within the dream.
